PREFACE.

THE PROTOCOL BOOK of Mr. Gilbert Grote is No. 15 of the series of Protocol Books preserved in the Record Department of His Majesty's General Register House.

Though it discloses very little information regarding the notary himself, there is no reason to doubt that he was a native of the County of Caithness, with which, especially with the Parish of Canisbay,[1] the Grotes were for many centuries intimately connected. He is designed in his notarial docquets as "clerk of the diocese of Caithness,"[2] and he seems to have resided in the county,[3] at least, during the years 1548 and 1549, before he settled down in Edinburgh. The presence of a number of Caithness and Orkney writs in his Protocol Book, and the fact that he was employed professionally by the then Earl of Caithness, all tend to strengthen a belief in his Caithness connection.

While nothing definite has been ascertained regarding his parentage, the conjecture may be hazarded that he is identical with the Mr. Gilbert Grote, son and apparent heir of Mr. William Grot, who, on 24th May 1543, resigned a two-penny land in Dungsby into the hands of his superior in favour of Hugh Grot, his brother.[4]

During the period covered by his Protocol Book, Grote was resident in Edinburgh, his writing-booth being in the High Street. The transactions recorded, however, are by no means confined to Edinburgh and its neighbourhood, for, like his modern successor, he drew his clients from all quarters—from Orkney in the north to the Solway in the south, and from the shires of Berwick and Aberdeen in the east to the Island of Coll in the west. In addition to exercising the office of notary public, Grote was employed as a writer in the offices of the Treasurer and the Comptroller, the published accounts of these officials disclosing various payments to him between the years 1558 and 1580.[1]

Further, narrating that he did so for, inter alia, the following reasons, viz.—(1) On his first coming to the bishop (i.e., on 9th October) he testified by honest and famous men that "my Lord Robert, be vertw of contractis betuix him and the said reverend fader, wes obligat to present the said Maister William to him, certifiand the said Maister Williame and the remanent that come witht him that he wald nocht tollerat nor permit the said Maister Williame to cum owt of Orknay vnto Allhallowmes nixt to cum witht Maister James Annane and Mr. Gilbert Fulsy, superintendis of Orknay and Zetland, nochtwithstanding the quhilk purpose the said Lord

Robert compellit the said Maister Williame to pas sa suddanlie and haistelie to the schip, that he micht nocht (get nowther?) his writtingis nor zit his clathis to bring witht him thairon utherwayis nor he come hcer at that present tyme." He, therefore, offered to find surety to the bishop that he would bring his compt books and writs of defeasance for the foresaid years, and, on a just count and reckoning being made, either find caution for any balance due "or ellis his body and gudis to be comprisit and pvnist thairfore conforme to iustice"; which offer the bishop refused and locked him "in ane cauld fast hous withtin his said place quhair was na fyre nor eisment, etc., and suerit be his gret aith that the said Maister Williame suld nocht be thollit to cum owt of the said place wnto he maid compt and rekynning of the forsaidis zeris dewiteis." (2) He then offered to frame accounts, "eftir his rememberance," under protestation that as his papers were absent he should have "place" at the production thereof, but the bishop would neither admit his protest, nor "sic ane rentale as wes vse and wont to the bisheopis chalmerlanis withtin Zetland afoir his tyme," nor that he got payment through James Hay, his servitor, for the crop of 1567, nor that Lord Robert got payment for the crop of 1568. (3) The bishop refused to make any allowance to him for the following items, viz. :—(a) "ony restis in the commonis handis," (b) certain butter and hard fish delivered to the bishop himself, (c) six barrels or thereby of "vlie" delivered to Johnne Hammiltoun, burgess of Edinburgh, and (d) his expenses in collecting the duties and coming south on 9th October 1566 and remaining till May following, in order to render his accounts for the years 1564 and 1565. (4) The bishop and the said James Hay framed an account on the assumption that he had got complete payment of all the duties, without making allowance for the preceding deductions and payments made for 1565 and 1566, and bringing out a balance due to them of 294 "angell nobillis." (5) Notwithstanding the assedation by the bishop to him of the teinds and kirklands of the parishes of Zell and Fetlare, at a yearly rental of 8½ barrels butter and 10½ barrels "vlie," he charged him for the years 1564 to 1567 with 3 barrels butter and 21 "zoppindalis" more than was specified in the assedation, thus bringing out a balance due equal to the sum contained in the obligation. (6) The bishop caused him to copy out and subscribe the foresaid accounts and obligation, under the pain of perpetual warding, and thereafter to compear before the bailie of the regality of Brochtoun and consent to the registration thereof in his books; which he did only through compulsion and fear of perpetual ward, and "wanting of fire and gret cauld," and also because the bishop had formerly detained him from Martinmas 1566 to Beltane 1567, whereby he was damaged to the extent of £100. He, therefore, appealed to the Lords of Council, before whom he was prepared to make just compt, reckoning, and payment of any balance due, and protested for remeid of law, etc. Done on 17th October 1569 in the notary's writing-booth in Edinburgh. ship or "craer" called the "Stilhert" (Robert Trowpe, skipper,) was in like manner loaded with bear from the said Gilbert's tenants of Westray, that they were to have past together to Flanders had their ship not been sunk in the sea by force of evil weather, and that they believed the other ship lay at that time in the port of Moutro.
